Scout Neckerchiefs

The neckerchief is the most characteristic and distinctive part of the uniform of a Scout. It has a great number of useful purposes, some of them available in emergencies, so that a Scout on duty should never be without his neckerchief. The color of the neckerchief indicates the troop, district or council. Worn with neckerchief slide of contrasting color. Made of a splendid quality of soisette, size 28 by 32 inches of excellent appearance, strong and durable. Available in 16 plain colors and 13 color combinations listed below.

The Practical Uses of the Neckerchief

SIGNAL

Adaptable to more than fifty emergency uses, the Scout Neckerchief is perhaps the one thing by which the Boy Scout is most quickly recognized all over the world. More than fifty uses have been developed for the Boy Scout Neckerchief, and whenever you find time hanging heavy on your hands why not perfect yourself in one of these uses until you are master of all of them? Here is a list of 55 uses, some of which are illustrated, to which you can put the Scout Neckerchief, and which has been prepared by Commodore W. E. Longfellow, Life Saving Corps, American Red Cross. The numerals following some of the "uses" indicate the number of neckerchiefs required.
